

Contents

Introduction	How to use this book	1
Chapter 1	Thinking about theory	5
	What makes theory “theory”?	5
	Is theory pure, universal, and impartial?	7
	Positivism, or the theory of anti-theoretical positions	9
	Thinking through theory	11
	Conclusion	15
	■ Jargon	8
	■ What’s the difference between theory and methodology?	13
	A place to start	15
Chapter 2	The analysis of form, symbol, and sign	16
	Formalism in art history	16
	Iconography and iconology	19
	Panofsky’s iconography and iconology Iconography and iconology since Panofsky Practicing iconography and iconology
	Semiotics	26
	The founding semioticians: Saussure and Peirce Systems and codes Interpreting codes and signs Semiotics and art history Practicing semiotic art history
	The object of art history	40
	Word and image	43
	Conclusion	44
	■ Are works of art puzzles? Are art historians detectives?	32
	■ Do we “read” works of art?	37
	A place to start	45
Chapter 3	Art’s contexts	46
	The history of ideas	46
	Marxist and materialist perspectives on art	48
	The critique of capitalism and historical materialism Ideology and cultural hegemony Marxism and art Materialist and Marxist art history Practicing Marxist art history

Feminisms	59
A brief history of the women's movement The beginnings of feminist art history Current issues in feminist art history Essentialism and feminist art history Practicing feminist art history
Sexualities, LGBTI Studies, and queer theory	68
LGBTI Studies Queer theory Gender performativity, a key queer idea LGBTI/queer art history Practicing LGBTI/queer art history
Cultural Studies and post-colonial theory	75
Race and post-colonial theory Subaltern Studies Globalization and transnationalism Practicing art history informed by globalization and transnationalism Art history, Cultural Studies, and Visual Culture Studies Practicing art history informed by Cultural Studies/post-colonialism
Conclusion	86
■ So what's normal—or normative?	69
A place to start	87
Chapter 4 Psychology and perception in art	88
Art history and psychoanalysis	88
Basic Freud Freud on art Freud's critics Basic Lacan Lacan on art Lacan's critics Psychoanalysis and contemporary art history The gaze
Reception theory I: the psychology of art	106
Reception theory II: reader-response theory and the aesthetics of reception	110
Practicing reception theory/psychoanalytic art history
Conclusion	117
■ Jungian archetypes	93
■ Object relations theory and the nature of creativity	95
■ The anxiety of influence	107
A place to start	117
Chapter 5 Taking a stance toward knowledge	118
Hermeneutics	118
The hermeneutic trio The hermeneutic circle Hermeneutics and art history Practicing hermeneutic art history

Structuralism and post-structuralism	126
Culture as structure Binary oppositions Intertextuality and the death of the author Post-structuralism Foucault's history: knowledge is power Structuralism, post-structuralism, and art history Practicing structuralist and post-structuralist art history
Deconstruction	137
Art history and deconstruction Practicing deconstructive art history
Postmodernism as condition and practice	142
Defining modernism(s) Adding the "post" to modernism Challenging master narratives Fragmentation, pastiche, and the simulacrum Modernism, postmodernism, and art history Practicing postmodernist art history
Conclusion	150
A place to start	151
Chapter 6 Writing with theory	152
The kind of paper you're probably writing now	152
Learning how to write with theory	156
The place of theory in research	157
Which comes first? How do you know which theory (or theories) to use?
Writing the paper	161
Crafting a theoretically driven argument Integrating theory Supporting your points/providing evidence
Creativity, imagination, and truth	164
A place to start	165
Notes	167
Acknowledgments	179
Index	181
Photo credits	186