

Contents

Introduction:	The Cold War as a Way of Seeing	7
	Against Modernism and the Cold War	16
Chapter 1	Marking Territory: American Abstraction, Soviet Figuration, and the Early Cold War	19
	The Socialist Roots of American Abstraction	24
	The Modernist Origins of Socialist Realism	31
	Universalizing Aesthetics	39
	Sly Subversion	47
	Exporting Styles	51
Chapter 2	Art, Technology, and the Cold War	61
	Transforming the Invisible—"Nuclear Painting"	67
	The Cybernetic Imagination	72
	Cold War Constructions	80
	Art as Irrational Technology	89
Chapter 3	The Cold War and Global Pop Art	93
	The Cold War Family of Photography	97
	Aesthetics of Indifference	102
	Capitalist and Communist Pop	107
	Gerhard Richter and Christo—between East and West	115
	Collaging the Military–Industrial Complex	124
	Coca-Cola and Global Pop	129
Chapter 4	1968—Art and Politics on the Barricades	135
	Steel, Lettuce, and Dead Hares: The Politics of Materials	141
	China's Cultural Revolution	148
	France and Czechoslovakia: Art and Protest	150
	Television: The Electronic Street	161
	Banding Together, Attacking Museums	164
	The Cold War, 1968, and Deconstruction	169

Chapter 5	Art and Détente	173
	Nothing to Say: Conceptual Art	179
	Bodies and Surveillance	187
	Détente and Artistic Exchange	193
	Limits of Détente	199
	The End of Détente	207
Chapter 6	A Return and then the End	211
	Neo-Expressionism: Common Ground in the 1980s?	215
	Other Alternatives to Socialist Realism	222
	Strategies of Appropriating the Cold War	226
	Total Environments: Installation Art and the Cold War	235
	Art as Activism in the 1980s	243
	The End of the Cold War	249
Conclusion	Art and the Legacy of the Cold War	253
	Artistic Dilemmas after the Cold War	261
	Globalization and the End of the Cold War	269
	Bibliography	274
	Picture Credits	281
	Index	282